1 From Robertsbridge railway station head west along Brightling Road and turn right up Ludpit Lane. After 300m take the path on the left. Follow the path through the trees and then downhill over a field and along a path to the side of Column Wood, rich in bluebells in spring

2 After crossing the stile at the end of the wood, head over the grassy field and look out for the bridge on the right next to some trees. Cross the bridge and continue through the next field, keeping to its left-hand edge. Go over the stile next to Burgh Wood and follow the path downhill over the cow fields, staying close to the edge of a line of trees and hedges. Shortly before Furnace Cottage, go through the gate to a field on the right and walk up to and through Burgh Wood, which has another fine array of bluebells.

3 After the wood follow the path downhill over a field and to the side of some farm buildings to Fontridge Lane. Turn right and walk for 1.5km to the junction with Ludpit Lane. Look for the track opposite and walk up to Squibs Farm. Walk to through the farm buildings and take the path that runs south-east. Follow the path downhill for 500m, then cross two bridges separated by a small field.

4 Now head uphill through a crop field. At the far end of the field, walk downhill through the trees, cross the bridge and continue uphill again. At the top of the slope, go through a gate into a grassy field. Keep to the field's right edge and go through the second gate on the right. Follow the path downhill as far as a path on the left. Now walk to the railway line, turn right and follow the path to Robertsbridge.
